

Week of 2/19/2018 Operations Update

Warmer temperatures have held and so has the mosquito activity.

While populations are not as high as they would be during the active season, they are sufficient to warrant control measures. Zones highlighted yellow were sprayed in the morning after 2 am.

Many of our surveillance areas are finally starting to dry down as indicated by the majority the inspection diamonds marked red for dry.

We are anticipating a more active season this year and it may begin sooner than expected if it stays warm. The only missing ingredient is some rain.
