

Week of 4/16/2018 Operations Update

Last weeks rainfall produced a significant increase in the mosquito population and became more evident as temperatures increased throughout the week. We will likely not see the fullest extent of the increased population until overnight temperatures are in the mid-sixties consistently.

Zones in yellow on the map below were treated between two and six AM. A busier season than usual is anticipated this year and it looks to be an early start as well.
